5 To receive an update on low flying training from Major Gary Walker Ground Liaison Officer at RAF Marham Mr Andrew Aves of Hinderclay made a presentation about the reasons why fast jets from RAF Marham have started to use the area for training. All present were astounded to hear that this area of East Anglia with its gently rolling hills and hedgerows bears a startling similarity to part of the area of operations in Afghanistan. As such it is an ideal area to practice in the last few weeks before a unit deploys for active service there. As we are all aware our locality has been used for many years as an area for the training of Apache and Chinook helicopters however fast jets are a new addition. Andrew explained that there is a 'target' area in Hinderclay and the crew of these Tornado aircraft need to hone their low level skills and communication with ground staff in the area before they deploy to Afghanistan and use those skills in support of ground forces. Most of the training takes place above 5000 feet however there is also a need to make occasional runs at 250 feet and it is these that could cause the most disturbance to residents. As stated above training is only needed in the run up to deployment and this is only every three to four months however this very rarity means that we do not become accustomed to the sudden arrival of a jet at high speed just above our home! The next deployment is likely to be in October.

Following Andrew's presentation there was a lively discussion on the issue. While all those who spoke expressed great support for our forces and their need to be fully trained and equipped before deployment there was considerable anxiety expressed by those present. The greatest worry was the effect on animals in general and horses in particular. The possible repercussions of the sudden noise on a horse that is being ridden or pulling a carriage either on the road or on private land could be very serious indeed. Several residents asked if the noise could be the cause of cracked windows and 'blown' double-glazed units. Andrew was unable to give any opinion as to this aspect but did say any concerns and complaints should be made to the Ministry of Defence.

To minimise the possible risk to horse riders and others Andrew proposed that all who wished could be informed by email two days in advance of possible activity. To register for this warning please send your email address to Blo Norton Parish Council on blonorton@googlemail.com. We will then forward the list to Andrew.

Plantation: Mr Davey, who owned the Plantation, The Street had begun clearing the area with a bulldozer between the road and the trees to reinstate the field access into the trees so that the centre of the tree plantation can be cleared of trees leaving a 20 yard “hedge” to hide the clearance. He is in discussion with the Forestry Commission as to what to do with the trees as they are not useful for much. They could be pulped for use in chipboard and the tops used as Christmas trees. Another use might be to again pulp them and use them as an industrial fuel. It is then intended to replant the cleared area with Oak and to make the area open for school children and disabled children. The intention was to burn off the clearings from the front area and that was proposed for 5 November. It was Mr Davey’s intention to provide fireworks, beer, soft drinks and food for the people of Blo’ Norton and to arrange for the children to have sparklers (the Chairman suggested to Mr Davey that this may not be acceptable under health and safety). Mr Davey wanted the Parish Council to arrange insurance for the event and to take “ownership” of it and it was agreed to explore the costings of such insurance, although Mr Davey said that if the Parish Council could not do this then he would.

[Secretary’s Note: Parish Clerk spoke to insurance company who said if the event was not on Parish Council land and not organised by them they could not insure it. They also did not provide event insurance for one day and suggested exploring other insurance companies]
